TO KEEP AT IT.

One reason for continual advertising is "to be there" when the "cultivated and convinced" but "slow-going" buyer gets ready to do business with you. Sometimes, but not always, buyers "clip" or "mark" ads for future reference. But usually they say, "Well, next month I'll get that." Now, next month, if you are not there to remind them, they are likely to forget that you ever existed, and you then lose the good effects of your previous advertising. Naturally, when a buyer wants an article badly and has the price, he "buys on the spot." But buying on the spot is more often the exception than the rule. —Mail Order Journal.

FINE BUSINESS SHOWING.

As everyone knows, The Republican was started on June 14, and is therefore just three and one-half months old today. A look at the advertising columns of today's paper will tell more eloquently than words how well the paper is succeeding and how it is meeting the approval of the people.

The linotype machine ordered in April arrived yesterday on the bark Olympic and will be unloaded and set up within a few days. After today the Sunday Republican will consist of not less than ten or twelve pages, so that readers who feel that the reading matter in today's paper is limited can be assured that hereafter they will get a Sunday Republican that will be far ahead of any paper ever heretofore issued in the Hawaiian Islands.

England has a pretty hot campaign of its own on its hands just now and before the elections are over they will know how it is themselves.

Wilcox's chances of going to congress have gone a-glimmering. The fight last night seemed to lie wholly between Parker and Prince David.

Oh, pull down that iron fence about the capitol grounds and the huge gates barring the way thereto. The grounds belong to the people; give them a chance to enjoy them.

The pilot boat boys have quit work, not because they do not want work, but because they cannot live on the money paid them. They undoubtedly have a just grievance and this territory cannot be proud of asking men to work for $9.75 a month.

The work which Mr. Wray Taylor, commissioner of agriculture and forestry, has undertaken in introducing parasites to kill off insect pests is to be commended. In a quiet way Mr. Taylor and Entomologist Koebele are doing good work for the future of these islands.

Count von Waldersee may be a great soldier and just the man for the command of the allied forces in China, but he is constantly raising doubts in the unprejudiced mind. First he talked too much and then his first act was to order a grand review. The American troops in China are there to fight and not for dress parade purposes, no matter how it stands with the forces of other nations. Von Waldersee seems to be a later edition of General McClellan.

The outlook in the coal regions of Pennsylvania is anything but reassuring. In the neighborhood of 140,000 coal miners are now out in the Lehigh, Lackawanna, Luzerne and Schuylkill regions. This comprises the entire anthracite coal belt, the region in which the hardest battles between capital and labor have always been fought in the coal regions. Never in the past have troops awed these men nor have strikes ever been declared off there because of the presence of soldiers. Work has always been resumed after arbitration and there is every reason to believe that the present strike will be no exception to the rule. It is to be hoped that the operators may soon accede to arbitration and misery and perchance bloodshed be avoided.

The Lounger

People of Honolulu seem to have some peculiar ideas of the province of a newspaper and the duties of a reporter. My attention has been directed to this on several occasions recently, notably in connection with some banquets. The people in charge of the banquets threw favors at the reporters as though they were animals who were coerced through fear or something else. I have had a good deal of experience with lawyers, reporters, actors and other professionals and I maintain that reporters, man for man, are as honorable and courteous a set of men as follow any profession in the land. They are men of education and refinement and men of broad experience in affairs. I am told that one editor in Honolulu informed his reporters not long since that hereafter when any one of them attended a banquet he should demand courteous treatment and a seat at the table where he could attend to his duties properly or to turn and walk out.

Of course there are bores in the newspaper profession as well as in all others and these men oftentimes cause people in other walks of life to gain bad impressions of reporters as a whole. The actions of one of this rude class, which, thank heaven, are few, was called to my attention a few nights ago. A man who is not always persona grata where his duties take him, but who is tolerated because of his position on a newspaper walked into a gentleman's office in quest of news. Just as he stepped up to the desk the man he was addressing was in the act of closing a drawer in which was a box of cigars. Mr. Fresh Reporter at once reached quickly into the drawer and picked out a cigar, evidently thinking his rude act was a piece of smart business. The gentleman he was addressing would have been justified in kicking that reporter out of his office. But notwithstanding the faults of the very few of this character that unfortunately get into the business, that is no excuse for the rude treatment of all reporters so often extended conscientious workmen by people who seem to think a reporter is not deserving of any consideration.

I was much interested in the article in The Republican a few days ago on the English language. It reminded me of a famous editorial by that great man Charles A. Dana five years ago. Besides his talent as an editor, being the dean of the profession, as J. B. McCullagh of the Globe-Democrat called him, Mr. Dana was a very learned linguist, reading and speaking nearly every language of Europe. Speaking of the use of the German language in the United States, Dana closed with this tribute to the English tongue: "There is nowhere in the world a more robust, forcible or comprehensive language than English. It is the language spoken by the largest number of civilized people. It is the language of those nations where free institutions flourish. It is the language of progress, the language of liberty, the language of law and order, the language of commerce, of invention, of newspapers; the language of the future, superseding other languages in all continents but Europe. It is the official language of the United States and of every public department of the government. We quote from an American poet:

"I like the Anglo-Saxon speech
With its direct revealings;
It takes a hold and seems to reach
Away down to your feelings."

With the native leaders political differences seem to "cut no ice" when it comes to their social relations. One evening just before Prince David's departure for Hawaii he gave a very pleasant dinner at Lycurgus' Union Grill, at which Sam Parker and Charles B. Wilson were guests, as were also Mr. Loebenstein and Mr. Walker of Hilo, and others. The republican lion laid down with the democratic lamb, politics were eschewed and small talk only was indulged in between the popping of the corks.

Beautiful, clever Belle Archer, the opera bouffe singer and capable all round actress is dead. She died of a blood clot on the brain in the Emergency hospital at Warren, Pa. Mrs. Archer made her first hit as Hebe in John T. Ford's original production of "Pinafore," a character for which nature had cast her. She was an exceedingly beautiful girl and at the time caused a furore that ever stood her in stead in her professional career. She was, however, more than a stage beauty. She was a sweet voiced singer and a clever and conscientious actress, who achieved success by her art and never resorted to advertising her personal charms. Her maiden name was Belle Mingle and she was born at Easton, Pa., where her father was prominently connected with the Western Union Telegraph company and largely identified in business. Belle made her debut under John T. Ford at Baltimore before she was 16 years of age. She was about 38 years of age at the time of her death, an event that will bring sorrow to thousands upon thousands of devoted friends in this country and in Europe. Of late years Mrs. Archer had made her home in California.

When T. McCants Stewart gets a phrase like "legally involved" he can roll it out more rollingly and ring the changes on it oftener than some officeholders of Hawaii can change their political creeds to keep in line with the kaleidoscopic changes in the body politic of these islands.

Speaking about politics reminds me that a good story has been allowed to go to waste when the "family compact" pulled down A. V. Gear in the legislative convention for the Fourth district. Talk about bolting and personal assaults was freely indulged in and the money and influence of the sugar planters was held up as a menace. It is a great story and I am surprised that the usually enterprising news-pers have not given us the true and vividness of this most important meeting.

Of course, the Advertiser wouldn't have bolted and supported J. O. Carter and S. M. Damon as its inspired friends said it would. The Advertiser is a republican paper, you know—when things go its way.

Did it ever strike you what a beautiful political meeting place Progress hall really is? It is large, light and airy and amply provided with committee rooms. It is an ideal convention hall.

The morning conferences of the sanitary inspectors have become very popular and are really proving of considerable benefit. As soon as Dr. Pratt can make up his staff of lecturers the weekly lectures to the force will be inaugurated. Some one has maliciously suggested that the course of lectures be extended and daily clinics be introduced, so that the board of health might run its own school of medicine when the new dispensary building is finished. Good idea!

The authorities should keep their eyes on sailing vessels, some of which are smuggling Belgian hares into Oahu. I am reliably informed that as many as twenty-five pairs are now in this city and others are being brought in from time to time. They are not desirable importations and are mighty liable to become a pest.

Registrar of Voters Wray Taylor has troubles of his own, but his chief pillula now is of other men's making. It devolves upon the registrar to send out ballot boxes and when the elections are over the boxes are returned to him. Each box is provided with a Yale lock and only one key. It is this key that gives Mr. Taylor his headaches. The key is sent to the election board under separate cover. That's all right, but it is the manner in which the keys are returned to him that is making him gray and bald-headed. The election officers are usually so careful about them that, after the ballots are all in and the boxes locked and ready for shipment, they throw the keys through the slot into the box. As there are no duplicate keys, the only way the registrar can open such boxes is with an ax. This is annoying to the registrar and costly to the territory. Will the election officers kindly take this matter to heart and return those keys under separate cover to Mr. Taylor?

The coping on the rounded corner of the capitol grounds wall at Richards street has been put on and I am sorry to see that preparations are under way to replace that beastly iron fence. I had hoped that the fence and iron gates at the entrances would all be removed, now that the monarchy has passed away and the grounds no longer belong to rulers, but to the people. It is an absurdity to close these grounds in the evening just when the people would most enjoy them. The building is locked, of course, but the grounds should never be closed any more than are any of the other parks. The territorial government is no longer a family arrangement and the men in office not rulers, but servants, of the people. Then why hedge the capitol about with iron fences and lock out of their grounds the people with big iron gates? Visitors from the mainland must think that the territory is preserving something precious in the old palace. Tear down the fences and the gates and sell them for junk.

Some better arrangement ought to be made to care for the flower girls that now make some sections of the streets of Honolulu so distinctive. In sunshine and in rain their lot is not what it ought to be and the vendors of Hawaii's beautiful flowers are compelled to move from side to side of streets to find comfort. Who wouldn't miss the flower girls if they should stop selling flowers? It would be in the nature of a public calamity. What would we do on steamer days; whence would come the leis? Truly, the flower girls of Honolulu are more than a unique feature of our cosmopolitan life. They are an absolute necessity. What rich man will immortalize himself by establishing a flower market?

HE WEARS A REAL MEDAL.

A Beautiful Souvenir Presented by Healanis to George Beckley.

The Hilo Tribune says: The reason why the Kinau was so late in arriving Wednesday evening was said to be that she waited for the Hawaiian delegates who were at the convention. The Tribune has found out the true reason, however. She bore Commodore Beckley, wearing on his breast the life-saving medal of the Healanis Boat club, and the weight of her responsibility made her "go slow."

George, if not the Kinau, has reason to be proud of the beautiful memento of Regatta day's capsizing and rescue which was made by Wichman. It is a miniature life-saving belt, done in white porcelain. The center is a blue ground upon which are raised gold letters "G. C. B." in monogram. The reverse bears the inscription: "Presented to George Beckley in recognition of heroic actions Sept. 15, 1900." The bar of the pin by which the medal is attached to George's manly breast bears the inscription: "Commodore George C. Beckley."

The medal was presented to Mr. Beckley just a half hour before the Kinau sailed for Hilo. Consequently the news is in none of the Honolulu papers received here.

Prince David made the presentation in a neat speech and the whole club offered their apologies for the previous faux pas which was engineered by Chester Doyle, as Mr. Beckley believes.
